SMALLPOX AT ODESSA

Miss Elva Moore, teacher in the public school at Odessa, was placed in quarantine on Saturday, as it was discovered that she was suffering from small-pox. For about a week Miss Moore has been confined to her bed, but the doctors in attendance were puzzled to know the cause of her illness. On Saturday afternoon it was discovered that she had contracted small-pox. It is not feared that her case is at all serious. She has been living in the western part of the village and for that reason the residents are not so much worried.

A SAD AND SUDDEN DEATH

Without an instant's warning death came to Reginald Vanalstine, son of Mr. B. S. Vanalstine, Palace Road. On Thursday noon with his brother Harry he indulged in a friendly race home from work, and going up from the gate to his father's home he fell and expired in his brother's arms. Deceased has had some slight indications of heart trouble but nothing to be considered seriously, and he was at work at Gibbard's Factory as usual on Thursday morning. Deceased was a bright young man, and his sudden death is deplored by his many friends. He was aged 19 years, and 4 months. The funeral will take place on Sunday, at 2 p.m. to Grace Methodist Church and interment at Biverview Cemetery.

CAUSED HIS OWN DEATH

The verdict returned on Tuesday, at Enterprise, by the jury empanelled to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of the late Wm. Leeman, who, with a Bulgarian, was instantly killed by the explosion of dynamite at Enterprise, on May 5th, was that the deceased met his death from an explosion of dynamite placed in a dangerous position by himself. In view of the action, which was likely to be instituted by Mrs. Leeman, the widow of the deceased, the remains of the dead man were exhumed at Railton cemetery, where they were interred earlier in the month. Dr. G. H. Cowan, coroner, of Nanapsee, who conducted the inquest, took the jury-men to the cemetery, where the remains were immediately re-interred. At the time of the accident Dr. Cowan, who was notified, after investigation, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

In the Millinery Department

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them. The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly confected of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but, it must be placed "just so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired of milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

OPEN LETTER

as of Cheese Factories, and Cheese Factory Owners.

early part of the summer of plaints were received by this ent from Montreal cheese
ts to the effect that the proof broken boxes among the ents of cheese they were rey rail from points in Quebec ern Ontario was much great-usual and an inspector was at-gued to duty at the railway s in Montreal in order to e condition of the boxes as e delivered from the cars. A g Inspector was also sent out gate the manner in which e handled and loaded at coun-ing points. All car-load shipe loaded by the men who cheese from the factory and ctors found that the cause of 90% of the breakage was due t that, in loading the cheese,
not taken to stow the boxes
that they could not knock e fall down in transit and during shunting operations.
ctors reported that it was a practice to pile the cheese ach end of the car with a pace across the centre into e boxes pitched at the first t the car received.

ver it was possible the In-reported the names and ad-
the shippers in whose lots ble breakage was found and are sent to them from this ing more care in loading the our request both the Cana-ific and the Grand Trunk

structing them, so far as ies would permit, to supervise ng of cheese. As a result,
e latter part of the season s noticeable improvement in age with a consequent rein the proportion of broken d this year we hope to see a ater improvement.

le the cheese are hauled to the cheese should reach the n first class condition. Now en will not take the trouble eir own cheese in the cars so boxes will remain intact and ything better from railway ship employees?

boxes mean damaged cheese
aged cheese mean lower repations because in the final

Disinclined to Matrimony.

Among the non-Burmese tribes that live in Burma women are not thought much of. The Banyak or Banyangs, for instance, will not marry unless they are ordered to do so, and the prospective bridegroom often has to be dragged to the bride's house. It is left, however, to the Was to reach the depths of ungallantry, for with them marriage is a question of sale or exchange. A prepossessing bride is estimated at a few buffaloes. One who is ill favored may be had in exchange for a pair of fowls or even a dog.

The Problem Was Clearly Untenable.

Dorothy, a little first grader in the city schools, has a small brother who is considered an angel child by no one but mamma, so when teacher gave Dorothy this problem, "If your mother should give you 5 cents for keeping Jack while she goes to market on Saturday how much would you earn in six weeks?" she readily replied,
"Why, Miss Hudson, I wouldn't keep that naughty boy if mamma gave me a quarter!"—Kansas City Star.

A New Experience.

"Dropped a little at roulette while I was abroad," remarked the ice man.
"Can't beat that game," said the coal man.

"Wasn't trying to. I just wanted to see how it feels to lose money."— Louisville Courier-Journal.

Where It Was.

"Why don't you get some labels on your suit case to show where it's been?"

"The pawnbrokers don't furnish labels."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 27. A firm believer in personal liberty and no man with such beliefs can help it, will live in Canada. C. J. Sparling, author, on his way to Tramping Lake to operate a three-thousand-acre farm. Mr. Sparling lived three years half in Ontario, and is unsparing in his criticism of its so-called laws.

"Ontario's narrow-gauge puritanical laws are driving all who loathe them from its territories," says Sparling. "quicker than it can replace with its immigration efforts the province has great possibilities. It is impossible to keep the people there. They are driven to the United States or western provinces, and if ever in Ontario attain to the natural progress of an English-speaking people it will be by a change in the laws in law-making. I am afraid west will follow in its footsteps."

THREE MEN ARE KILLED

Premature Blast May Take Total of Five Lives.

Workmen In Cutting Near Belleville Are Shattered by Explosion and Two Are So Badly Injured They May Not Recover—One Survivor Objected to Methods and Got Away In Time.

BELLEVILLE, May 27.—Three men were blown to pieces yesterday morning about 11 o'clock and three injured, two possibly fatally, when a premature blast took place about five miles east of this city. A gang of Dominion Construction employees were at work blasting in a cut on the Le-big'i Cement Co.'s farm in order to make excavation for the Canada Cement Co.'s railway spur below the roadbed of the C.P.R. for grading is taking place in this district for opening of the Lake Shore line.

The following are the dead: John H. McLean, foreman; A. Holland, powder helper; V. Amorelli, No. 41, powder helper.

A hole about nine feet deep had been blasted out, and workmen had been blasting one hole after another. A man named John Grey had been charging the holes, and it is stated that he complained to the foreman, John H. McLean, that the charging was going on too rapidly. He refused to continue, saying that one hole was what is called "hot hole," meaning that friction of the drill had caused the rock to heat. The foreman is said to have replied: "If you don't like our gait, then quit." This, it is reported, Grey did, considering himself discharged, and climbed out of the excavation.

He had just got out of range when a terrific explosion occurred in the hole, and returning he found an awful sight awaiting his gaze.

Two masses of flesh had been blown clear of the cut to the east of the excavation, and the remains of another body were found on the west side. Lying near by were three wounded men. He hastened to headquarters and gave the alarm. Dr. Boyce, coroner of this city was summoned, and physicians called to the scene of the fatality.

DENIES SLANDER.

Sir Wilfrid Denounces Story of Threat To Resign.

OTTAWA, May 27.—The House spent a rather quiet day in dealing with routine business, the interest of the members being largely centered on the proceedings of the Senate.

The House will sit on Saturday and prorogation is confidentially expected next week. Sir Wilfrid Laurier took advantage of Mr. Speaker, taking the chair at six o'clock to denounce as utterly without foundation, a report published in a number of Conservative papers yesterday morning, to the effect that he had threatened to resign as leader of the Liberal party, unless the Senate threw out the naval bill.

At the question hour, Mr. Borden, in the absence of Col. Sam Hughes, read the answers to the questions upon the order paper respecting the resignation of Gen. Mackenzie. They stated in substance that Gen. Mackenzie had resigned, but did not give the reason for the resignation. Upon motion of Mr. E. M. Macdonald, an order of the House was issued for copies of the correspondence upon this subject between Gen. Mackenzie, the War Office, and the Minister of Militia.

In reply to some questions about the term of service of Col. Drew, commandant of the Royal Military College at Kingston, the Prime Minister contented himself with saying that the commandant's term of service would expire next October.

Hon. Frank Oliver again brought to the attention of the Government the case of the Indians who had been induced to sell to the British Columbia Government their reserve of 79 acres, in the city of Vancouver for $250,000, when its real value was really ten times that sum.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, acting Minister of the Interior, said the matter was under investigation.

The House then went into committee of supply on the Intercolonial Railway estimates. Liberal members complained of the removal from office of Mr. J. E. H. Caron, ex-M.P., as a member of the board of management.

Mr. Cochrane said that the Government had decided to abolish the board; it could not change its policy for the sake of keeping Mr. Caron in his job.

Mr. Lemieux said it was customary to show more consideration to ex-members of the House. He spoke of two cases where the Laurier Government had taken care of prominent Conservative ex-M.P.'s who were in financial distress.

The Hudson Bay Railway estimates occasioned some discussion. Mr. German of Welland, intimating that the whole scheme was impracticable.

RETURNED TO PRISON.

Mrs. Pankhurst Sent Back to Serve Rest of Her Term.

LONDON, May 27.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, is again in Holloway jail. She was re-arrested yesterday, having in the opinion of the authorities sufficiently recovered her health to warrant her serving another period of her sentence of three years' imprisonment.

Mrs. Pankhurst, though evidently not strong when arraigned at the Bow Street Police Court, declared vehemently that she would continue her hunger strike until she died or the Government gave women the vote.

When the gates of Holloway jail opened to receive her, a score of militants tried to rush the prison, and the warders had difficulty in preventing them from entering with their leader. For a long time they remained outside shouting: "We will keep on fighting until we win."

COURAGE SAVED HER.

Duchess of Connaught Was Determined to Recover.

LONDON, May 27.—That the recovery of the Duchess of Connaught is due mainly to her pluck is the opinion of her intimate friends.

From the first she showed the greatest determination to recover from the serious second operation which she was forced to undergo. For a time she denied herself entirely the pleasure of seeing her daughter, the Crown Princess of Sweden, lest the excitement of meeting her after such a long separation should retard her recovery.

It started to move and, trying to board it with his heavy valise, he missed the step and fell between the platform and wheels.

By the strenuous work of the brake-man and porter, he was saved from being crushed.

LOBBYISTS THICK.

President Wilson Aroused by Fight Against Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—President Wilson stirred Congressional circles yesterday with an emphatic statement denouncing the "industrious" and "insidious" lobby in Washington attempting to create public sentiment against certain features of the Underwood tariff bill. This was accepted at the capitol as referring to the unusual efforts being made against free raw wool and free sugar.

While the President was declaring it his opinion that the public should be relieved "from the intolerable burden," Senators and Representatives were viewing on every hand the evidences of the lobbyists who beset them; and significance was attached to a statement made by Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, which now has the tariff bill in hand that, in his opinion, the lobbyists were not making any headway.

The President's declaration that the lobbyists were so thick that one "couldn't throw a brick without hitting one," revived interest in two bills recently introduced in the House and Senate to regulate lobbying on pending legislation.

Democratic leaders were almost unanimous in support of the President's statement maintaining that they are well able to handle the important pending tariff legislation and that sugar and wool will be thoroughly considered, and discussed both in the Finance Committee and Democratic caucus before the bill is reported to the Senate. Many conflicting rumors being sent broadcast regarding proposed changes in these schedules are attributed by the Finance Committee members to lobbyists. That no change of policy relating to either schedule has yet been determined is flatly declared by the members of the committee.

Changing Tastes In Perfumes.

Perfumes were in common use in the ancient world, but it is curious to notice how views have changed as to the pleasantness or otherwise of various odors. The smell of aloes is now considered disagreeable by the majority of people, but in the old days aloes, both as solid extract and as wood, formed a staple perfume or aromatic. Saffron, too, was the most popular perfume of the Romans and was much in favor in England until about the sixteenth century. But who would tolerate the smell of saffron about house or person nowadays?—London Chronicle.

The Glacial Epochs.

Several times in recent years it has been observed that great explosive volcanic eruptions (Krakatoa, Pele, Katmai) by charging the upper atmosphere in the isothermal region with fine dust have markedly diminished the amount of solar radiation received at the earth's surface. It seems evident, according to Professor W. J. Humphreys, that the effect of this process must be to reduce the temperature of the air near the earth, since the dust scatters a great amount of the solar radiation. Thus a period of excessive volcanic activity, if long continued, would produce the thermal conditions of an ice age. The geological record is said to furnish evidence that such a period actually began shortly before the last ice age and has continued with diminishing intensity to the present time.

Cupid's Bargain

And It Really Was a Very Good One.

By LESLIE HOLMES.

"But, my, dear"—interposed Aunt Ella, reaching for her handkerchief.

Beth Graham resumed her interrupted monologue.

"I never saw an advertisement which balanced so tidily with one's qualifications—"Wanted, services of a capable young woman for few hours daily. Must be well educated, have pleasant manners, a gift for conversation and make a good appearance. No experience necessary, but large acquaintance desirable. Apply to the Interborough Realty company, — street." Now, I have the education. Behold my diploma from Mme. Collingwood's select school! Thanks to my bringing up by the best aunt in the world, I have the reputation of being well mannered. I am considered chatty without being a bore. My new tailored suit gives me the good appearance demanded. Certainly I have no experience, but a lot of acquaintances."

Mrs. Graham mopped her eyes diligently.

"I cannot bear to think of you, a Graham of Graham Center, going into business. Now, there are my cameos—cameos are in style again. Beth!"

The girl laid a slender white hand over her aunt's trembling lips and spoke with sternness not entirely affected.

"Aunt, dear, never again speak in that way of our precious family heirlooms. So long as they are in the safe deposit vault I shall feel that the Graham honor is saved. I intend to answer that advertisement."

An hour later the secretary of the Interborough Realty company looked with relief into the fresh, high bred face of the last of the Graham Center Grahams, who, thanks to the collapse of the — bank, was looking for a po-

great loads of building materials through unfinished streets.

In one of the half finished houses a colored man served hot coffee and sandwiches to the few excursionists who had braved the elements, but no deals were consummated. After the bus had taken the few visitors back to the station Beth, seated on a plasterer's horses, studied critically the tiny reception hall, while Langhorne, perched on a window seat, studied the girl and wondered why some women looked smart and trig even in a cravenette coat and a soft felt hat.

"These early spring days are so uncertain," she was saying. "I wish there was a fireplace in that corner. You could just as well build one, for the chimney runs up there from the parlor. Then we'd have a snapping, sparkling fire that would make the whole house seem charming. I believe we'd make a sale, rain or shine."

"But the fireplaces would add to the cost of the houses," said Langhorne doubtfully.

"And make prospective customers overlook some other defects in your houses. I noticed you have no back stairs. Now, every suburban housewife likes separate stairs for her one servant. She is much more punctilious in such matters than the city housekeeper."

"Eh—what?" exclaimed Langhorne curiously.

"Yes, and you should have utilized that wasted space for a closet for rubber coats, umbrellas, overshoes, etc. A woman will fall for a couple of convenient closets, when stained glass windows and artistic tiling are lost upon her."

Langhorne was all attention now. "I didn't suppose that a city girl would notice things so closely."

"I began life in a village," said Beth quietly. "Besides, if I am to help you sell these places I must believe in them, and I cannot believe in them unless they are right."

Before the next excursion day rolled around Beth had examined every house under way, and her suggestions for small alterations that would appeal to the feminine mind were received with respect. Furthermore, all plans for new houses were brought to her before the work was commenced.

Hollingsworth Terrace became the center around which everything movcoming in short, nervous gasps, her eyes wide and startled.

"Oh, I know it's no end of cheeky in me, but when that bloated barrel of a Hopkins (you remember you disliked him so) offered me $8,500 today for The Lodge I told him it was sold. I simply had to buy it myself and take chances on you. You're the certain girl."

"Oh, Teddy! Teddy Langhorne!" said Beth, with a glad little cry. "We'll have hickory logs to burn in the fireplaces—and, yes, yes, I love you! Of course it isn't all the house, silly, but it does count some. You know, we built it together."

"But to refuse $8,500 for it. Oh, Teddy! That was downright reckless!" she murmured later.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Langhorne, regaining possession of her hand. "Personally I think I got a pretty good bargain."

Lloyd-George's First Narrow Escape.

Mr. Lloyd-George will never die from ennui. The suffragettes will see to that. But it is interesting to recall how his life nearly ended abruptly when he was a year old. He was seized with croup one winter's night at Haverfordwest, where his parents lived, and his mother had to hurry through the snow to find a doctor. He arrived when the baby was almost at his last gasp and barely succeeded in pulling him through the attack. Many years later at Cardiff the same doctor came up to the present chancellor of the exchequer after a meeting and told him of this incident, adding that as he went home that winter's night he had wondered whether it had been really worth while to save the baby's life, since there was no prospect before the baby, but the life of an agricultural laborer.—London Chronicle.

GIRLS ON THE LADDERS.

Their Rapid Work In Coaling Ships at Nagasaki, in Japan.

Coaling at Nagasaki, Japan, is done entirely by girls. Big coal barges bear down upon the ship as it approaches the shore, and as soon as it comes to anchor a rough ladder is placed between the liner and the foremost barge.

On each rung of it a girl takes her place. Men in the barge quickly shovel the coal into shallow baskets holding half a bushel each to the sound of a monotonous chant, and these baskets then pass from hand to hand up the living ladder with marvelous celerity.

Each girl seizes one and swings it straight up in front of her, above her head, when it is caught by the next girl. Down a second ladder, likewise packed with girls, the empty baskets pass in similar manner back into the barge to be refilled.

Barge after barge is emptied in this way. The monotonous chanting never ceases. The living elevator goes on hour after hour with its never ending stream of baskets until the last bunker is full, when the ladders disappear as if by magic and the ship is ready to proceed on her voyage.

A Pacific Mail steamer will "bunker" 2,300 tons of coal in six and a half hours, an average of 353½ tons per hour, or nearly six tons per minute, an almost incredible record.—Wide World

PEACE DESIRABLE WAR A NECESSITY

A Vexed Question Viewed from a New Angle.

Peace Impossible Except Under Certain Conditions — If Vainly Brought Dire Evil, It Should Be Credited Also as the Basis of World's Progress — Teaching of Jesus Not Applicable to

Washington, May 25. — Russell, a the W. Temple, a statement, seemed yet re His a quite up popular yet seem

An hour later the secretary of the Interborough Realty company looked with relief into the fresh, high bred face of the last of the Graham Center Grammys, who, thanks to the collapse of the — bank, was looking for a position in which experience was not demanded. The secretary of the company, like all men of his class, questioned the girl so cleverly that she had told the story of her inexperience and needs long before he unfolded the requirements of the position. Then he leaned back in his chair and remarked:

"I think you'll do, Miss Graham. We have plotted ninety acres on the Chester turnpike, and we're going to boom the site as the Hollingworth Terrace. We've got the Transit Construction company interested in the deal, and they will build houses on the installment plan. We have some wide awake chaps on the ground, but we are planning a series of excursions, and we think a bright woman with the gift of saying the right thing at the right minute could put through many a sale, particularly with men. Now, such work is generally done on a commission basis, but you're rather up against it, and we'll pay you fifteen a week and expenses and give you a month to make good."

He touched an electric button and said to the answering boy:

"Send in Mr. Langhorne. He's the working head of the Transit Construction company and a promising young man. You'll probably have considerable dealing with him. Langhorne, this is Miss Graham. She's going to help us out at Hollingworth Terrace."

And thus, with a sweeping gesture, did the secretary of the Interborough Realty company settle Beth Graham's entrance into the business world.

Fifteen dollars a week! Why, they would have to let even Emma, the cook, go. She would probably wear out many shoes, too, tramping over Hollingworth Terrace. And then a mellow masculine voice broke in upon her reflections, and she found a very good looking young man, with Irish blue eyes that smiled right into hers, standing at attention, some pamphlets in his hand.

"Perhaps you would like to look over some of our literature before you join us on the first excursion tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow?" echoed Beth. It seemed so dreadfully near, this earning of daily bread for herself and Aunt Ellen.

But she smiled and accepted the books. Half an hour later it seemed to her as if Hollingworth Terrace must be a sort of paradise for small salaried people and that she, in selling homes to them, would be a veritable angel of mercy.

The next day she felt differently. The first excursion was not exactly a success. The air was heavy with mist, and Hollingsworth Terrace seemed a wilderness of surveyors, steam rollers, sewer pipes and tired teams, dragging small alterations that would appeal to the feminine mind were received with respect. Furthermore, all plans for new houses were brought to her before the work was commenced.

Hollingworth Terrace became the center around which everything moved, and Aunt Ellen studied plans and offered suggestions to young Langhorne, who had taken to bringing drawings to the cozy Graham flat. So far simple cottages costing $5,000 or less had been erected. Now they were planning more ambitious residences and plotting the most valuable site of their holdings, a broad knoll that overlooked the river and surrounding country.

Here in the heart of a cluster of pines was to be a house of old English design, with high gables, sloping roof and quaint interior finish. Beth watched those plans grow with jealous care. She selected the timbers for finishing the ceiling of the reception hall, living room and dining room. The fireplaces she and Langhorne designed from pictures of English country houses.

The excursions were heavily patronized now. Sales were made while Beth's back was turned. Hollingworth Terrace was booming beyond the fondest hopes of its founders. Beth often came in from her calls on prospective customers to ask anxiously, "Has The Lodge been taken?"

They had named the house of their own planning The Lodge, nothing more, and somehow she felt that she should hate the man who bought it.

One night when Langhorne dropped in to call he did not look her in the eye. He talked about any and every subject but Hollingworth Terrace, and Beth knew that The Lodge had been sold.

"You might as well fess up," she said, with pretended gayety. He nodded his head.

"Yes. We withdrew The Lodge from the market at 4 this afternoon."

"Who bought it, and, oh, do you think they will dare to put Turkish rugs in that old English living room?"

"Oh, no. I assure you he'll have nothing but hand woven rugs, just as you suggested."

"Well, that is some comfort," the girl murmured. "If he has taste I can forgive him. What sort of a man is he, married or single?"

"Single, but he bought it hoping that a certain girl would share it with him."

"Was she with him? Is she a nice girl? Do you think she will appreciate it?" demanded Beth breathlessly. "You know I simply love that fireplace in the hall!"

Langhorne rose abruptly and paced the floor. Suddenly he paused before her chair, his lips firm, his blue eyes ablaze with a light she had never seen there before.

"Do you think—could you make up your mind—to sit beside that fireplace—always—with me?"

She looked up at him, her breath

as if by magic and the ship is ready to proceed on her voyage.

AN ARCTIC EXPERIENCE.

Talking and Wrangling to Ward Off Brooding and Insanity.

"I had not much opportunity to speak English during those twenty-eight months when Iversen was my only companion," says Captain Einar Mikkelsen concerning an experience in the arctic regions. "I thought it would help to pass the time if I tried to teach him English, but it didn't amount to much. Iversen wasn't keen on learning a new language where there seemed to be very little chance of our ever wanting any language at all, except to say our last prayers, and so the scheme fell through."

"When the others were there we talked about everything through those dark months—everything under the sun. Silence is golden, perhaps, but not in the arctic, for to live men left to their own devices speech, continual speech, is the only saving grace. Silence must be avoided at any cost, for silence means brooding. Still it is as well as a rule to avoid controversial topics—politics, for instance—though it is the last desperate winter, the third of this trip, I remember we did talk politics, having exhausted pretty nearly everything else."

"One of us, for the purpose of argument, became a staunch Conservative and the other a Socialist of the deepest dye. All the things we had to argue about were two and a half years old and might have been settled, perhaps but for us the world had stood still. We even got as far, I believe, as involving Europe in a universal war, and then it suddenly occurred to us that in these circumstances no ships might come next year to the Greenland coast and that awful prospect was too horrible to contemplate, so we dropped politics. We dreamed a good deal and found some comfort in telling each other our dreams and perhaps embroiling them a little."

"It scarcely seems credible, but I remember that it was almost a relief to wake up one night with a raging toothache. At any rate, it was something new, and I began to calculate how long it would last until I could get to a dentist, supposing we were taken off by a ship the following summer. I made it 210 days—say, 5,000 hours of toothache. It didn't last as long as that, but it stayed quite long enough to make me prefer some other kind of distraction."—Chicago News.

The Concertina.

The concertina dates from the early part of the last century. Its invention was an early indiscretion of Sir Charles Wheatstone of telegraph fame, who took out a patent for it in 1829, the very year in which somebody in Vienna invented that similar instrument, the accordion. The concertina was popularized by Signor Regondi, who had come before the public as a juvenile prodigy with the guitar. At one time no London concert was really complete without him and his concertina, and he astounded the Germans with the music he could get out of it.—Exchange.

Washington, D.C.,
May 25. — Pastor

statements which seemed startling,
yet reasonable.
His arguments
quite upset some popular theories,

quarters. Labor, having organized, develops strength daily. It is pro-

Moreover, for years our great colin the inspiration of the Bible, and their influence has extended finally to the masses. These are now declaring their doubts respecting a future life,

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 26.—Wheat rallied today when it was shown that rains in the dry districts were light. The market closed nervous at prices ranging from Saturday's close to 1/2c up. Corn made a net gain of 1/4c to 1/2c; oats finished unchanged to 1/4c higher, and provisions were dearer by 5c to 7 1/2c to 35c.
The Liverpool market closed 1/4d to 3/4d higher on wheat, and 1/4d higher on corn.
Berlin wheat closed 1/4c higher and Budapest 1 1/4c lower.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, May 26.—Altho wheat prices opened strong as compared with the closing figures of Friday, the market later sagged and showed heaviness, due to improved weather conditions over the Canadian West and lack of export demand. Nearing the close there was a sharp advance on reports of dry weather, and spotted condition of the crops in North Dakota. Opening prices were 1/2c to 3/4c higher, and closed 1/4c to 1/2c higher. The cash demand for wheat was extremely dull, exporters doing nothing, while offerings were fairly plentiful. Cash prices closed 1/4c to 1/2c up for contract, and No. 2; lower grades unchanged to 1/4c higher. Oats were steady and flax weaker. Cash oats closed 1/4c to 1/2c higher;
options 1/4c higher. Cash flax closed 1c to 1 1/4c lower; options 1 1/4c to 1 1/2c lower.
Receipts continue very heavy. Inspections yesterday were 536 cars; in sight
today, 500 cars.

Deliveries thru the clearing house were:
Wheat, 126,000 bushels; oats, 4000 bush-

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 26.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 24 were 1200 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 1700 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 900 cattle, 325 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 400 calves.

There was no actual change in the condition of the market for good to choice cattle since this day week, but it was stronger for cows and bulls and prices show an advance of 25c per cwt. Picked lots of choice steers sold as high as $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt. There was a fair demand from packers for medium and common cattle, and sales of mixed carloads of the former, steers, heifers and bulls were made at $5.75 to $6 and the latter at

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World
—Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a sore-ness in my stomach.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better
and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families
to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them
from surgical operations.

LARGE ORDER.

The Fellow Who Made a Bad Guess
and Was Embarrassed.

Two men sat in the public room of a local hotel. Neither of them could read or write, and each was ignorant of the other's failing.

A waiter, coming into the room,
handed one of them a telegram.

He opened it at once and pretended to read, saying as he did so, "Very good—very good indeed!" loud enough for the other to hear. He then handed him the telegram, asking him if he would advise him to accept the offer.
No. 2 also pretended to read and said that it was very good, but he could not think of advising him in a matter of that sort.

The first man then got a telegram form to write his acceptance of the offer he pretended he had received.
Not being able to write, he pretended that he had sprained his wrist and asked No. 2 to write it for him. But he at once refused on the plea that they would recognize his handwriting.

The waiter was then called in, and
No. 1 addressed him as follows:

statements which seemed startling, yet reasonable. His arguments quite upset some popular theories, yet seemed so rational as to be convincing. His text was: "He maketh wars to the end of the earth . . . and know that I am God."—9, 10.

What Is the Remedy?
The Pastor explained that the Scrip- tures show that the time of trouble looming up before mankind will be so terrible that the world will have its fill. Thenceforth under the guid- ance of Messiah's new administration the spirit of a sound mind will gradu- ally come to mankind as a whole, and proportionately they will turn to Messiah's kingdom in loyal obedience, declaring, as says the Prophet, "Lo, this is our God; we will wait for Him; He will save us." Rich and poor of every nation will gradually be made aware of the changed condi- tions, and all lovers of righteousness will rejoice.

VALUE OF GRASSES.

They Are in a Measure the Most Use- ful Plants in the World.

Probably the grasses are the most useful plants in the world. It may be that more than half the individual plants in the world are grasses. It is a great family of more than 3,500 species, embracing species that are so tiny that they hardly reach an inch in height and giant bamboos of the tropics that sometimes grow to be 100 feet or more.

Corn is a giant grass, and wheat, rye, oats, barley, rice and sugar cane are all grasses. Then there are millets, sorghum, Kaffir corn, broom corn—all grasses.

The number of species of grasses is enormous, yet we have adopted into our system of agriculture but a few sorts. In part that is due to the ease or difficulty of seeding grasses. Timothy grass, for example, is so easily sown and the seed so easily gathered that it is soonest set of any and has become the standard hay grass of northern climes.

In some regions of Kentucky blue grass is the almost universal pasture grass because it comes in of itself. In other regions with different soil (poor and lacking in lime) redbud has posses- sion. Naturally the farmer follows the line of least resistance, yet it is by no means certain that he has adopted into his agriculture all the best grasses that nature has provided. Some day we shall do more toward using now neg- lected grasses.—Joseph E. Wing in "Meadows and Pastures."

cattle since this day week, but it was stronger for cows and bulls and prices show an advance of 25c per cwt. Picked lots of choice steers sold as high as $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt. There was a fair de- mand from packers for medium and com- mon cattle, and sales of mixed carloads of the former, steers, heifers and bulls were made at $5.75 to $6 and the latter at $5.25 to $5.50, while car loads of cows for canning purposes sold at $4.75 per cwt. A few choice bulls weighing from 1500 to 1700 pounds each brought $6.50 to $6.75 per cwt.

The tone of the market for sheep and yearling lambs is much weaker than it has been of late and prices have scored a sharp decline. There is a fair demand for spring lambs, which are selling from $6 to $10 each as to quality. There is an active demand for calves, of which the offerings are ample to fill all require- ments at steady prices.

The tone of the market for hogs was firm and prices show no change as com- pared with a week ago. The demand from packers was good and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $10.65 to $10.75; sows, at $9.15 to $9.25, and stags, at $4 to $5 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

A shipment of 2200 hogs has been made from the Canadian northwest, which will arrive here this week. They have all been sold to two leading packing concerns at $13.25 per cwt., dressed.

LONDON, May 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A Melbourne despatch to the Lon- don Chronicle says, the general elec- tion campaign which terminates on Friday is being carried on with al- most unparalleled keenness.

Liberals are making a strenuous at- tack on the country constituencies, which were captured by the Labor party in 1910. The Labor party ad- mitted the possibility of losses, but are confident that they will retain a working majority.

Medals For Artillerymen.

KINGSTON, May 27.—The presenta- tion of long service medals to four artillerymen was a special feature of the parade of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery brigade yesterday to mark Victoria Day. Those who re- ceived medals were: Sergt.-Major W. Peppiatt, Q.M.S. W. Stevenson, Q.M.S. T. J. Turner and Gunner M. Glenn. The last named three are members of "A" Battery. Col. Hem- ming congratulated the men and also addressed the brigade.

The waiter was then called in, and No. 1 addressed him as follows:

"Will you kindly answer this tele- gram for me?" handing it to him to read. "Tell them I'll take a dozen at a dollar per head."

"But, sir," said the waiter, "there must be some mistake. That is not the answer to this surely. Your tele- gram says, 'Come at once; twins.'"

"Great Scott!" yelled the man. "I've given you the wrong one!" And he hastily departed amid the laughter of the company.—New York Journal.

Figs Too Heavy to Lift.

There is a fig tree in Oceania with small leaves and flowers, but which bears fruits which are perhaps the largest borne by any tree on earth. These round fruits are sometimes so large that a man cannot lift them. The ker- nels are eaten roasted like chestnuts, but they are not easily digestible. Then there is the Jack of the Indian archipelago, with a huge trunk and dense foliage on the broad branching summit, while the fruit measures eight- een inches by fifteen. On another tree the leaves are one and a half feet long and one foot wide.—Philadelphia In- quirer.

The Subtle Difference.

An earnest defender of things Irish asserts that the traditional bull of Ire- land is not, as is commonly supposed, the expression of a blundering intelli- gence, but, on the contrary, shows the exquisite feeling of the Irish for fine shades of meaning. The trouble lies in the ears that hear it.

"If ye were to be killed crossing a fence ye'd be all right," said a looker- on to a fox hunter whose horse had turned head over heels in the middle of a level pasture, "but if ye were killed on the flat o' the field ye'd never hold up your head again!"

The Sour Milk Habit.

The Masai and other tribes of Brit- ish East Africa keep milk in cala- bashes or gourds ornamented with cowries and beads. These are period- ically cleaned out with the charred wood of the lolyiye tree, which gives the milk a smoky taste. Stale milk is often mixed with fresh to induce it to curdle, and sour and curdled milk of many days old is highly appreciated by most African tribes.—"The Land of Zinj."

A Light Plant Nucleus.

A little Oil City girl, being told that it was electricity which made her mother's hair crackle, remarked:

"Oh, what a family we have! Mam- ma has electricity in her hair, and grandpa has gas in his stomach. Why don't we start a light company?"—Oil City Derrick.

Political Palmistry.

"I like to clasp the hand of the man with calloused palms," said the states- man of democratic instincts.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "but how are you going to know whether he's a toiler or a golf player?"—Wash- ington Star.

The great successes of the world have been affairs of a second, a third- day, a fiftieth-trial.—John Morley.

The Last Meeting.

On the afternoon of the 21st. of May the last and probably the most entertaining successful meeting for this season of the Napanee Franchise League was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms. The lady attendants were, as usual, intelligently interested in the vital question of Canadian laws for women which was excellently handled by Miss Robinson, who also kindly accompanied a chorus with her banjo. Miss Robinson discussed particularly Quebec laws which are undoubtedly bad, to speak moderately. All questions were carefully answered and discussion favored by the speaker, who, being well acquainted with her topic, was able to quote recent events to aid her explanations or to prove her points. Florence Ballance gave a brief reading showing how male beings are so superior and how perfect contentment prevails when the female is a submissive, inefficient individual. Although but few meetings have been possible since the organization of this league, still it has flourished and will probably increase next autumn when the members can get together again and continue their study of woman, her interests and her rights.

ONTARIO POLITICS

SPEAKER'S BUREAU.

One of the chief undertakings of the Liberal Club Federation of Ontario is its Speakers' Bureau. By this plan the various Clubs forming the Federation, (there are nearly 40 now and new ones are being organized constantly.) will be able to secure good speakers for their meetings. The lack of such speakers in the past has been a serious drawback, especially in the smaller places.
The Federation is already collecting a list of speakers from all parts of the Province and is securing their consent to have their names placed on the Bureau. The speakers will not be asked to take engagements more than two or three times during the season and they will be given sufficient notice
in advance.
The Speakers' Bureau is only one of the activities of the Federation but if it works out well it in itself will justify the formation of the Union. Mr. W.
R. Preston of Brantford is President of the Federation and the Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau is Mr. Claude Sanagan, of London.
PROUDFOOT MEETING. -
All signs point to the success of the Proudfoot demonstration in Goderich on May 30th. The public have not forgotten the charges against Sir James Whitney and Hon. W. J.
Hanna, nor the way in which the investigation brought on by the charges led by Mr. Proudfoot, was throttled and tampered with. Mr. Proudfoot's services in connection with the charges are being recognized more and more fully and this meeting is a definite mark of appreciation. Not only are Mr. Proudfoot's own townsmen anxious to honor him, but his constituents from all parts of Centre Huron are showing keen interest in the event and as many as are able are going to

Men Who Have Lost Their Hair Should Wear one of Dorenwend's Sanitary Patent Toupees.

We recommend all bald-headed men to see Prof. Dorenwend, who will be at the Paisley House, Napanee, Wednesday, June 4th, with a sample stock of hair toupees and wigs, which are designed to suit both young and old. Do justice to your looks by appearing young and wearing a Dorenwend Patent Hair structure. Indetectable, strong, featherweight, sanitary and ventilated. They are so securely kept in place that they cannot come off, except at the wearer's wish. Beneficial to health and comfort, adding a younger and softer expression to the face. They can be combed and brushed as one's own hair.

Do not fail to call for a free demonstration.

Over 25,000 men in all walks of life are now wearing his Toupees. Why not you?

Remember, Paisley House, Wednesday, June 4th.

COLD IN THE HEAD.

Its Constant Recurrence May Not Only
Be Serious, but Fatal.

There are all kinds of colds. Spring summer, autumn and winter, all furnish the means for a cold. In medical literature there is no such disease described as a "cold," yet almost everybody is more or less susceptible to this condition.

The writer used to suffer with "cold" in the head, throat, windpipe, bronchial tubes, stomach and bowels. That was before he learned that an abundance of fresh air—day and night air—was absolutely necessary to build up a high state of physical vigor and vitality to avoid "taking cold."

The most common form of this complaint is a cold in the head. In this condition there is an inflammation of the mucous membranes which line the nasal chamber. This is naturally self limiting. Nature allows the disease to run its course when recovery spontaneously takes place. This condition may be very mild, yet the constant "taking cold" may result in great damage and lead to fatal diseases.

The nasal cavities have direct connection with the eyes, ears, throat, lungs, stomach and bowels. When frequent colds, inflammation or congestion occurs in these vital parts and the "germs" or "filth" which is the direct cause of the trouble overcomes the "ginger" in the blood and membranes the "germ" or "filth" is carried to one or all of the organs or parts of the body and may result in some disease that terminates fatally.—Professor George A. Keene in Health.

THE EMPIRE AND THE NAVY

ESSAY WRITTEN BY MISS GRACE WARD.

(Which received honorable mention.)

Introduction.

In olden times.

The lesson of the sea; the sea power of the Saxons and the Normans.

The beginning of discovery; the founder of the Modern British Flag.

Tracing sea power through the reign of Elizabeth, the Stewart and the Commonwealth period.

Nelson.

Growth of the Navy.

Sea power in British History.

What the Navy means to the British and conclusive.

Islanders differ from people who live a long way from the Sea. The British being an island nation, find in the sea their defense, and an open road to all points of the earth. Food and other necessities of life for Islanders come from the sea. Hence understanding the use of the sea alone insures safety for the British Islanders and Empire.

Never in the world was any state quite like the British Empire. That a foggy island in the North Atlantic, where neither grapes nor olives will ripen, should have gained the control of nearly all the vacant places on earth with a cool climate, and also of three hundred and sixteen millions of people in India, is a miracle.

Britain holds the five points on the earth's surface which dominate the face of the waters—the Straits of Dover, of Gibraltar, of Babel-Madeh, of Singapore with Table Bay in South Africa. These points are the nerve centres of world powers. The ownership of Jamaica and Trinidad insure the rights of Britain when the Panama Canal is finished. These advantages came to the British, not from Government plans or forecast of statesmen, but from British seaman and explorers who listened to the call of the sea.

We do not know the name of the first man who hollowed out a log and set it afloat any more than we know who lit the first fire, who made the first wheel, who invented bedsteads, or who ate the first oyster. But the man who first floated on the salt sea in a boat dug out of a tree trunk was the man who made the British Empire possible. Even to this day the dependence of Britain upon the sea is expressed in the articles of war which contain the following declaration carried by all our warships:

"It is upon the Navy that under the good providence of God, the wealth, prosperity and peace of these islands, and of the Empire do mainly depend."

Safety for Islanders is obtained by keeping the enemy at a distance: not by waiting for the enemy to land. In the last thousand years the Fleet has five times prevented the downfall of England and helped to preserve the liberty of Europeans. But since history has mainly been written by landsmen it is silent on the subject of sea power. Every British subject should know what sea power really means, and in the following words I will endeavor to relate the story of the British Navy:

The fishermen began the Navy, for they were the first sailors; and the fishermen of Britain won the sovereignty of the Narrow Seas for England. This illustrated by the familiar story of Cnut and his courtiers.

they were the first sailors; and the fishermen of Britain won the sovereignty of the Narrow Seas for England. This illustrated by the familiar story of Cnut and his courtiers.

We do not know for a certainty what the earliest British ships were like. But we learn from Julius Caesar that in his time the inhabitants of Britain made use of light skiffs or canoes, made of basket work covered with skins of beasts. The fishing boats were gradually improved by copying foreign ships of the visitors of the Mediterranean or the raiders from Gaul who came as invaders. When sails were needed for the improved models, skins were tacked together to serve as sails. Canvas and sail-cloth were unknown in those days.

The early British learned much about sea power from the Romans. They helped the Veneti against Caesar in Gaul, but their fleet was destroyed by Caesar. When the British fleet was sunk Caesar despised the proffered friendship of the Britons. Caesar landed in England without opposition because the British had no fleet to prevent him. The lesson learned by the British in the sea war between Rome and Carthage may be summed up by saying the rich nations without navies, no matter how great their armies may be, are at the mercy of sea power in the hands of strong nations. When the Romans withdrew from England in consequence of trouble at home, freebooters from the North invaded Britain. The pirates who came from Holstein were Saxons, those from Schleswig were Angles. The Anglo-Saxon ships were much bigger than anything hitherto seen on the British Coast. Some of them could carry as much as fifty tons. They were propelled by a sail, and there being no rudder, the helmsman sat in the stern holding on his right side a paddle with which he guided the ship.

King Offa of Mercia, was the first early English king to grasp the meaning of sea power. The Saxons made a fish learned the lesson, and wholly forgotten, that on Navy, under the good God, the safety of this kin chiefly depend.

The reign of Elizabeth was for two things. First, a greatment of English exploratory covery—secondly, the defeat of Spanish Armada.

Attempts were made by and Davis to find a north-west to China. Then comes Frar great voyage round the world.

When the objects of the were defeated, and when to England was over-past men asked themselves why defence of English shores be easier and cheaper by the enemy in his own way of waiting until his arrival English Channel.

Drake's policy of looking coast of the enemy as the frontier has been followed day to this by the best schoolish seamen. We find the relapse of English sea power the reign of James I, but Commonwealth came into power was recovered, T under Charles II the neglected and England fell when her warships were before foreign enemy in the river. The English fought many battles with the Dutch before luxury and lethargy in Countries unnerved the disputed with England the the Narrow seas and the present the Trident.

It has been said of admirals they are divided into two. In one is Nelson, in the other the rest of the admirals. I more to embody the souls of than any commander of century. Though a fighting hated war and loved peace knew that the only way peace for England was to upon the sea. And upon

What This Sectional Fireplace Means to You

The "Sunshine" is a straight-sided semi-firepot, extra heavily bed and made in sections. The two sections allow for contraction expansion—which prevents cracking. The heavy and semi-steel give strength and added raising surface. Ashes can adhere to the straight which assures an all clear fire. This means greatest heat from fuel consumed.

These are some of the advantages of the Sunshine Furnace. Our agent will be pleased to show you others, or write for booklet.

fought many a battle for his country. The last battle Nelson fought was off the Cape of Trafalgar. on the 21st of October, 1805, and in the battle which ensued, the French and Spanish fleets were broken destroyed or taken captive. The victory, however, was only obtained at the cost of Nelson's life. The close of the battle was a tremendous scene of grandeur and destruction. England was saved. European freedom was saved. For more than a century England has had release from the perils of war or the prospect of war on British soil—thanks to Nelson and the navy. The need for a strong navy is greater to-day than it was on the day before Trafalgar.

In the old days manning the fleet was difficult. The government compelled men to serve in the navy when volunteers did not come forward in sufficient numbers. But when the "press gang" was abolished the recruiting of the navy was accomplished by a plan suggested by Admiral Vernon in the middle of the eighteenth century. The bluejacket was made to feel that his superiors were his friends; that he, no less than they, was a man and an Englishman. Discipline improved after this, and when the admirals and captains discovered that it is easier to bring out the good in man than to flog the bad out of him.

Then came the invention of steam. For a thousand years the progress at sea had been practically the same. William the Conqueror crossed the Channel by the same means that Napoleon attempted to cross it. Gradually came the abolition of mast and sails, until our modern navy has been developed. Torpedoes, gunnery, wireless telegraphy, coal and oil, all which have made the modern navy craft what it is, must not be overlooked.

That sea-power has been the dominant factor in British history was shown by the Battle of Sluys in 1340, which prevented England being invaded. The Battle of La Hogue in 1692 repeated the experience of 1340. The Battle of Quiberon Bay in 1759, and the Battle of Trafalgar in 1805, did the same thing—the two battles made England safe and sent England to sleep.

In the evolution of the British Empire, won and held together by the cement of the navy, we have passed through three stages. During the first stage Briton's colonies were as desirable properties held for the benefit of the mother country. This view ended in the loss of the United States of America.

After the loss of the American Colonies a school of thinkers came into existence who looked upon the countries inhabited by our kinsmen beyond the sea as useless and mischievous. They wished to get rid of the colonies because they looked upon oversea British settlements as a mill-stone round the neck of the United Kingdom.

Then came the third period in the history of the colonial policy. The colonies now known as Greater Britain are thought by everyone to be of the first importance both in politics and in trade.

Just a boy grows into a man, so, in a hundred years' time, the Dominion of New Zealand, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of Canada, and the Commonwealth of South Africa, may be of greater importance as world powers than the United Kingdom.

The British Navy has three duties to discharge; to protect our seaborne trade, to keep open the communications between the various parts of the Empire, and to prevent invasion of the United Kingdom, of India, of any of the great self-governing communities across the seas, or of any

Also a Great Master.

The persons in the gallery who were most impressed with the J. Pierpont Morgan collection of pictures were two small girls, one eight and the other ten years of age. Uncertainly they spelled out the names of the paintings, which conveyed very little, and they were truly moved, of course, by the dashing Duchess of Devonshire and the small princess by Velazquez, and the wonderfully engaging young lady by the unknown Spanish painter. Lastly they came to the portrait of Mr. Morgan himself, and from this they appealed directly to the attendant on guard.

"Please, sir," they asked, "did Mr. Morgan paint all these pictures?"

Captain C. H. Stigaud has written a book about the tribes of British East Africa in "The Land of Zinj." Referring to Mount Kenya, whose summit was reached by the Mackinder expedition, he says that the natives "believe that the upper slopes are the habitat of devils and all kinds of evil spirits. I am told that natives who have returned from the upper slopes are not at liberty to speak about what they have seen. The idea is that they have been let off by the demons of the mountains, but if they boast about it some evil will befall them, or the evil spirits will avenge themselves."

Britain is no longer isolated. She is no longer a mother-country with feeble colonies. She is one of five nations, speaking one tongue, governed by one law, subjects of one king.

The British tradition stirs the blood of our people wherever they live. The British tradition spreads also to people not of our blood but living under the British flag. The responsibilities resting on Britain are now too heavy to be borne alone. The great daughter nations have come forward to help England in her naval responsibilities. Battle ships provided by the people of New Zealand, Australia and Canada take an honoured place in the Empire's Fleet. Soon new navies created by the patriotism of the Dominions will arise. We hope, to share the proud but heavy duties of the Royal Navy; to preserve the Empire from attack, and to guarantee the peace of the world.

Upon the strength, discipline, spirit and efficiency of the Navy, the future of every boy and every girl in the Empire depends.

ADD STRINGS TO YOUR BOW.

And Keep on Broadening Your Sphere of Usefulness.

Ages ago some one found music in the twang of a bowstring, then another some one put two strings on a bow, and thus was made the first harp. String after string was added until the harp was too heavy to hold. Then they put it in a box and struck the strings with hammers worked by keys. They called that a harpsichord. It was the first piano. The finest and most costly pianola of today is just an evolution, just an improvement on the arrow shooting bow.

From the history of the piano comes the old, old saying, "He is adding strings to his bow." It means that one is evolving, improving something. It expresses caution, persistency, energy, enterprise.

Add strings to your bow—one at a time. Bring a new note into each week of work. Learn a little something new and use it. Thus you will increase the harmony and effectiveness of your work.

Anything that has evolved as the bow has can never stop improving. So with your work. The more simple the start the greater the possibilities of growth. Know your work from the very first string. Know that there is no limit to its possibilities.

Keep adding strings to your bow, harp, pianola—Joel Blank in Philadelphia Ledger.

Short Lived Giants.

Giants are notably short lived, and instances where men much above seven feet in height have reached the age of fifty years are almost unknown. Length of days does not go with excessive length of limb. But tallness which stops short of giantism usually is a sign of vitality. Tall recruits in continental armies, provided they are of proper weight, give least trouble from sickness and gain most from physical training. It must be remembered in this connection that "tallness" is not the same everywhere. Men accounted tall in southern Italy would be rather short in western Scotland or among the native stock of America. It is as if nature had fixed a standard height for each race and punished by some physical shortcoming those who varied much from that standard in either direction.—Chicago Journal.

Earthworms For Rheumatism.

Your paragraph, writes a correspondent, giving as a cure for bronchitis a bag of earthworms on the chest, reminds me of a prescription I heard of thirty years ago, given also "in all seriousness," in Nottingham market place, as a remedy for rheumatism. In this case, too, the earthworms formed one of the constituents, but it was necessary to put them into a bottle and pour upon them a quantity of powdered quicklime. The resultant compound, well rubbed into the affected parts, was guaranteed by the prescriber to be a certain cure for rheumatism.—London Chronicle.

The Window at the White Cat

By MARY ROBERTS
RINEHART

Copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.

I was speechless for a moment. "The fact is—I you see," I blundered, "it was a—merely a figure of speech, a—speech of figures is more accurate." And then dinner was announced.

Miss Letitia presided in garrulous majesty. The two old ladies picked at their food, and Miss Jane had a spot of pink in each withered cheek. Margery Fleming made a brave pretense, but left her plate almost untouched. As for me, I ate a substantial masculine meal and half apologized for my appetite, but Letitia did not hear. She tore the board of managers to shreds with the roast and denounced them with the salad.

"Please do eat your dinner," Jane whispered. "I made the salad myself. And I know what it takes to keep a big man going. Harry eats more than Letitia and I together. Doesn't he, Margery?"

"Harry?" I asked.

Miss Jane leaned forward to me after a smiling glance at her niece across. "Harry Wardrop, a cousin's son, and"—she patted Margery's hand with its ring—"soon to be something closer."

The girl's face colored, but she returned Miss Jane's gentle pressure.

"They put up an iron fence," Miss Letitia reverted somberly to her grievance, "when a wooden one would have done. It was extravagance, ruinous extravagance."

"Harry stays with us when he is in Manchester," Miss Jane went on, nodding brightly across at Letitia, as if she, too, were damning the executive board. "Lately he has been almost all the time in Plattsburg. He is secretary to Margery's father. It is a position of considerable responsibility, and we are very proud of him."

I had expected something of the sort, but the remainder of the meal had somehow lost its savor. There was a lull in the conversation while dessert was being brought in. Miss Fleming sat, one hand on the table, staring absently at her engagement ring.

"You look like a fool in that cap, Jane," volunteered Letitia, while the plates were being brought in. "What's for dessert?"

"Ice cream," called Miss Jane over the table.

"Well, you needn't," snapped Letitia. "I can hear you well enough. You told me it was junket."

"I said ice cream, and you said it was junket," called Miss Jane over the table.

top of my closet. When Jane found a picture of my niece, Margery Fleming, in Harry's room I thought it likely there was some truth in the gossip Jane heard about the two; and, if there was going to be a wedding, why, the pearls were to go to Margery anyhow. But I found the door of the safe unlocked and a little bit open, and ten of the pearls were gone!"

"Gone!" I echoed. "If ten, why not the whole ninety-eight?"

"How do I know?" she replied, with asperity. "That's what I keep a lawyer for."

"But you need a detective," I cried.

"I will not have the police," she persisted inflexibly. "They will come around asking impertinent questions and telling the newspapers that a foolish old woman had got what she deserved."

"Then you are going to send them to a bank?"

"You have less sense than I thought," she snapped. "I am going to leave them where they are and watch. Whoever took the ten will be back for more, mark my words."

"I don't advise it," I said decidedly.

"Stuff and nonsense!" the old lady said, with spirit.

"Then—what do you want me to do?" I asked. "Have Bella arrested and her trunk searched?"

"Her trunk!" she said scornfully. "I turned it inside out this morning. I want you to stay here for three or four nights. When I catch the thief I want my lawyers right by."

It ended by my consenting, of course. Miss Letitia was seldom refused. Little Miss Jane lighted me to the door of the guest room. Her thin gray curls bobbed as she examined the water pitcher, saw to the towels and felt the bed linen for dampness. At the door she turned around timidly.

"Has—anything happened to disturb my sister?" she asked. "She—has been almost irritable all day."

"She is worried about her colored orphans," I evaded. "She does not approve of fireworks for them on the Fourth of July."

I put out the light and sat down near the window, with my cigar and my thoughts. I had finished my second cigar. There was a sound of fumbling at one of the shutters below. With Miss Letitia's story of the pearls fresh in my mind I felt at once that the thief, finding his ten a prize, had come back for more.

I found on the mantel a heavy brass candlestick, and with it in my hand I stepped into the gloom of the hallway and felt my way to the stairs. I had kicked off my shoes, a fact I regretted later. I went into the library, which was beneath my room, but the sounds at the window had ceased. I thought I heard steps on the walk going toward the front of the house. I wheeled quickly and started for the door when something struck me a terrific blow on the nose. I reeled back and sat down, dizzy and shocked. It was only when no second blow followed the first that I realized what had occurred.

With my two hands out before me in the blackness I had groped, one hand on either side of the open door, which, of course, I had struck violently with my nose. My candlestick had rolled under the table, and after crawling around on my hands and knees I found it. For all her boasted watchfulness Miss Letitia must have been asleep.

"What did you do with that bag?"

"My name is Knox," I said coolly—"John Knox."

"Knox!" He snatched the candle from me and, holding it up, searched my face. "Then—good God—where is my travelling bag? I am Harry Wardrop, and I have been robbed, Mr. Knox. I was trying to get in the house without waking the family, and when I came back here to the front door, where I had left my valise, it was gone. I thought you were the thief when you came out, and—we've lost all this time. Somebody has followed me and robbed me!"

"What was in the bag?" I asked.

"Valuable papers," he said shortly.

"You are certain you left it here?"

"Where you are standing."

Something glistened beside the step, and I discovered a small brown leather travelling bag, apparently quite new.

"Here it is," I said, not so gracious as I might have been. I had suffered considerably for that travelling bag. The sight of it restored Wardrop's poise.

"By Jove, I'm glad to see it," he said. I can't explain, but tremendous things were depending on that bag, Mr. Knox. I don't know how to apologize to you. I must have nearly brained you."

"You did," I said grimly, and gave him the bag. The moment he took it I knew there was something wrong. He hurried into the house and lighted the library lamp. Then he opened the travelling bag with shaking fingers. It was empty!

"It's a trick!" he said furiously. "You've hidden it somewhere. This is not my bag. You've substituted one just like it."

"Don't be a fool," I retorted. "How could I substitute an empty satchel for yours when up to fifteen minutes ago I had never seen you or your grip either?"

He dropped into a chair, and after a pause: "I was followed in Plattsburg. Two men watched me from the minute I got there on Tuesday. I changed my hotel, and for all of yesterday—Wednesday, that is—I felt secure making my profile known at a close, and the jump on my leg from the chair was swollen, purple. I turned my back to the door and dressed in wrathful haste and my yesterday's linen."

Miss Fleming was in the bedroom. I have carried with me the months since that time a memento of her as she stood there in morning frock of some sort. The other day, having mentioned her, she assured me that the frock was blue. So I amend this. Miss Fleming in a blue frock was facing me when I went into the breakfast room. Of one thing I am certain, she is a good hand.

"Good morning," she said. "terrible face!"

"It isn't mine," I replied meekly. "My own face is beneath these excrescences. I tried to cover the bump on my head with French chalk, but it accentuated the thing, like snow on a mountain top."

"The purple peaks of Darien," quoted, pouring me my coffee. "I know, I feel so much better since I have taken hold of things. Auntia thinks you are wonderful."

I thought ruefully of the failure of my first attempt to play the part, and I disclaimed any right to Letitia's high opinion of me.

"Before any one comes down," I said. "I want to question or two. What was the name of the maid who helped you search the house that night?"

"Annie."

"What other maids did you see there?"

"Della and Rose."

"Do you know anything about where they came from or where they went?"

She smiled a little.

"What does one know about servants?" she responded. "I bring you references, but they are the price most women pay for their servants without Rose was fat and old, but Della was pretty. I thought she rather Carter."

Carter as well as Shields, the man. I put Miss Della down. "And you have no idea where they went?"

"None."

Wardrop came in then. The elderly ladies, it seemed, had toast in their rooms when they were called. Wardrop looked haggard, worn, avoided Miss Fleming and, after ordering eggs instead of chop, looked at his watch.

"I want to get the 9:30, Mr. Knox," said. "I may not be out to tell Miss Letitia, will you?"

He went to go, but came back to hold out his hand.

"I may not see you again," he said. "Not if I see you first," I interrupted. He glanced at my mutilated face and smiled.

"I have made you a Maithly said. 'I didn't think that; but a prodigal nature could do Miss Letitia's nose. I'm honest Mr. Knox, and if you do not Miss Jane at that bump with silver knife and some better duck before she comes Goodby, Margie."

I think the girl was as much

"Ice cream," called Miss Jane over the table.

"Well, you needn't," snapped Letitia, "I can hear you well enough. You told me it was junket."

"I said ice cream, and you said it would be all right," poor Jane shrieked. "If you drink a cup of hot water after it, it won't hurt you."

"Fiddle," Letitia snapped unpleasantly. "I'm not going to freeze my stomach and then thaw it out like a drain pipe. Tell Heppie to put my ice cream on the stove."

So we waited until Miss Letitia's had been heated and was brought in, sicklied over with pale hues, not of thought, but of confectioner's dyes. Miss Letitia ate it resignedly. "Like as not I'll break out, I did the last time," she said gloomily. "I only hope I don't break out in colors."

The meal was over finally, but if I had hoped for another word alone with Margery Fleming that evening, I was foredoomed to disappointment. Letitia sent the girl, not ungrudgingly, to bed and ordered Jane out of the room with a single curt gesture toward the door.

"You'd better wash those cups yourself, Jane," she said. "I don't see any sense anyhow in getting out the best china unless there's real company. Besides, I'm going to talk business."

When the door had closed behind her, Miss Letitia listened for a moment, got up suddenly and, crossing the room with amazing swiftness for her years, pounced on the knob and threw it open again. But the passage was empty; Miss Jane's slim little figure was disappearing into the kitchen.

"I didn't want to see you about the will, Mr. Knox," the older sister began. "The will can wait. I ain't going to die just yet—not if I know anything. But although I think you'd look a heap better and more responsible if you wore some hair on your face, still in most things I think you're a man of sense. And you're not too young. That's why I didn't send for Harry Wardrop. He's too young."

I winced at that. Miss Letitia leaned forward and put her bony hand on my knee.

"I've been robbed," she announced in a half whisper.

"Indeed!" I said, properly thunderstruck. I had always believed that only the use of the fourth dimension in space would enable any one not desirous to gain access to the Maitland house.

"Not the pearls?" I asked.

She answered my question with another.

"When you had those pearls appraised for me at the jeweler's last year, how many were there?"

"Not quite a hundred. I think—yes, ninety-eight."

"Exactly," she corroborated, in triumph. "They belonged to my mother. Margery's mother got some of them. That's a good many years ago, young man. They are worth more than they were then—a great deal more."

"Twenty-two thousand dollars," I repeated. "You remember, Miss Letitia, that I protested vigorously at the time against your keeping them in the house."

Miss Letitia ignored this, but before she went on she repeated again her catlike pouncing at the door, only to find the hall empty as before.

"Yesterday morning," she said gravely, "I got down the box—they have always been kept in the small safe in the either side of the open door, which, of course, I had struck violently with my nose. My candlestick had rolled under the table, and after crawling around on my hands and knees I found it. For all her boasted watchfulness Miss Letitia must have been asleep.

I got back into the dining room. Some one was fumbling at the shutters there, and as I looked they swung open. It was so dark outside with the trees and the distance from the street that only the creaking of the shutter told it had opened. I stood in the middle of the room, with one hand firmly clutching my candlestick.

But the window refused to move. The burglar seemed to have no proper tools. He got something under the sash, but it snapped, and through the heavy plate glass I could hear him swearing. Then he abruptly left the window and made for the front of the house.

I blundered in the same direction, my unshod feet striking on projecting furniture and causing me agonies, even through my excitement. When I reached the front door, however, I was amazed to find it unlocked, and standing open perhaps an inch. I stopped uncertainly. I was in a peculiar position. Not even the most ardent admirers of antique brass candlesticks indorse them as weapons of offense or defense. But, there seeming to be nothing else to do, I opened the door quietly and stepped out into the darkness.

The next instant I was flung heavily to the porch floor. I am not a small man by any means, but under the fury of that onslaught I was a child. It was a porch chair, I think, that knocked me senseless. I know I folded up like a jackknife, and that was all I did know for a few minutes.

When I came to I was lying where I had fallen, and a candle was burning beside me on the porch floor. It took me a minute to remember, and another minute to realize that I was looking into the barrel of a revolver. It occurred to me that I had never seen a more villainous face than that of the man who held it—which shows my state of mind—and that my position was the reverse of comfortable.

CHAPTER IV.

Little Miss Jane.

WHAT did you do with that bag?" demanded the man with the gun, and I felt his knee on my chest.

"What bag?" I inquired feebly.

"Don't be a fool," he persisted. "If I don't get that bag within five minutes I'll fill you as full of holes as a cheese."

"I haven't seen any bag," I said stupidly. "What sort of bag?" I heard my own voice, drunk from the shock.

"Paper bag, laundry bag?"

"You've hidden it in the house," he said, bringing the revolver a little closer with every word.

"Go in and look," I responded. "I don't know anything about a bag, but if you will give me your word there was nothing in it belonging to this house I will take you in and let you look for it."

The next moment he had lowered the revolver and clutched my arm.

"Who in the devil's name are you?" he asked wildly.

I think the thing dawned on us both at the same moment.

ther?"

He dropped into a chair, and after a pause: "I was followed in Plattsburg. Two men watched me from the minute I got there on Tuesday. I changed my hotel, and for all of yesterday—Wednesday, that is—I felt secure enough. But on the way to the train I felt that I was under surveillance again, and by turning quickly I came face to face with one of the men. I thought he was a detective. You know I've had a lot of that sort of thing lately, with election coming on. He didn't get on the train, however."

"But the other one may have done so."

"When we drew in at Bellwood station I distinctly remember opening the bag and putting my newspaper and railroad schedule inside. It was the right bag then. My clothing was in it and my brushes."

I had been examining the empty bag as he talked.

"Where did you put your railroad schedule?" I asked.

"In the leather pocket at the side."

"It is here," I said, drawing out the yellow folder. For a moment my companion looked almost haunted.

"The whole thing is impossible. That valise was heavy when I walked up from the station. I changed it from one hand to the other because of the weight. When I got here I set it down on the edge of the porch and tried the door. When I found it locked"—

"But it wasn't locked," I broke in. "When I came downstairs to look for a burglar I found it open at least an inch."

He stopped in his pacing up and down and looked at me curiously.

"We're both crazy, then," he asserted gravely. "I tell you I tried every way I knew to unlock that door and could hear the chain rattling. Unlocked! You don't know the way this house is fastened up at night."

"Nevertheless it was unlocked when I came down."

The sound of a smothered exclamation from the doorway caused us both to turn suddenly. Standing there in a loose gown of some sort, very much surprised and startled, was Margery Fleming.

"What is the matter?" she asked uncertainly. "I heard such queer noises."

"Mr. Wardrop was trying to break in," I explained, "and I came down. On the way I had a bloody encounter with an open door."

I don't think she quite believed me. She looked from my swollen head to the open bag and then to Wardrop's pale face. Then, I think, womanlike, she remembered the two great braids that hung over her shoulders and the dressing gown she wore, for she backed precipitately into the hall.

"It is only half past two," I said, glancing at my watch. "We might look around outside."

Reticent as he was, his feverish excitement made me think that something vital hung on the recovery of the contents of that Russia leather bag. But we found nothing.

As I look back on that night the key to what had passed and to much that was coming was so simple, so direct—and yet we missed it entirely. It was some time before we learned the true inwardness of the events of that night. I was almost unrecognizable when I looked at myself in the mirror the next morning, preparatory to dressing for breakfast. My nose boasted a new arch like the back of an angry cat,

"You heard me. I almost the stairs."

"Very well," triumphantly one did. Not only that, but I in the storeroom on the floor could hear one person, and two, going from one side of to the other and back again.

Following her gaze, I stopped, too, and I felt a sort of chill go over me. No spot or blemish, no dirty finger print marked the whiteness of that stair rail except in one place. On it, clear and distinct, every line of the palm showing, was the reddish imprint of a hand!

Margery had turned very white.
When the first revulsion had passed, I reached over and touched the stain.
It was quite dry, of course, but it was still reddish brown. Hunter said afterward it must have been about six hours old, and as things transpired, he was right. The stain showed a hand somewhat short and broad, with wideened finger tips; marked in ink, it would not have struck me so forcibly, perhaps, but there, its ugly red against the white wood, it seemed to me to be the imprint of a brutal, murderous hand.

We went on downstairs into the quiet and peace of the dining room. I got some hot coffee for Margery, for she looked shaken, and found I had missed my train.

"I am beginning to think I am being pursued by a malicious spirit," she said, trying to smile. "I came away from home because people got into the house at night and left queer signs of their visits, and now, here at Bell-wood, where nothing ever happens, the moment I arrive things begin to occur.
And—just as it was at home—the house was so well locked last night."

I did not tell her of the open hall door, just as I had kept from her the fact that only the contents of Harry Wardrop's bag had been taken. That it had all been the work of one person and that that person, having in some way access to the house, had also stolen the pearls, now was my confident belief.

I looked at Bella—the maid—as she moved around the dining room, her stolid face was not even intelligent, certainly not cunning. Hepple, the cook and only other servant, was part-

"Look in the fruit closet in the storeroom," I heard her say. "She's let the spring lock shut on her twice. She was black in the face the last time we found her."

"I did look; she's not there!" Margery, screamed at her.

"Then she's out looking for stump
water to take that wart off her neck.
She said yesterday she was going for some."

"But her clothes are all here," Margery persisted. "We think some one must have got in the house."

"If all her clothes are there she's been sleepwalking," Miss Letitia said calmly. "We used to have to tie her by a cord around her ankle and fasten it to the bedpost. When she tried to get up the cord would pull and wake her."

I sent for Hunter that morning, and he came at 8 o'clock. I took him through the back entrance to avoid Miss Letitia. I think he had been skeptical until I threw open the door and showed him the upset chair, the old lady's clothing and the blood stained lace cap. He took a crumpled sheet of note paper out of the waste basket and looked at it, then he stuffed it in his pocket.

Before he left the room Hunter went back and moved the picture that had been disturbed over the mantel. What he saw made him get a chair and,
standing on it, take the picture from its nail. Thus exposed, the wall showed an opening about a foot square and perhaps eighteen inches deep. A metal door, opening in, was unfastened and ajar, and just inside was a copy of a recent sentimental novel and a bottle of some sort of complexion cream.
In spite of myself I smiled; it was so typical of the dear old lady, with the heart of a girl and a skin that was losing its roses. But there was something else in the receptacle, something that made Margery Fleming draw in her breath sharply and made Hunter raise his eyebrows a little and glance at me.
The something was a scrap of unruled white paper and on it the figures "eleven twenty-two!"

Harry Wardrop came back from the city at 4 o'clock, while Hunter was in the midst of his investigation. I told him what had happened, and with this

of the open drawer there were traces of more. In the inner room two trunks had been moved out nearly a foot, as he found by the faint dust that had been under them. Then he took out his notebook.

"Have you a pencil or pen, Mr.
Knox?" he asked me, but I had none.
Wardrop felt his pockets.

"I have lost my fountain pen somewhere around the house today," he said irritably. "Here's a pencil—not much of one."

Hunter began his interrogations.

"How old was Miss Maitland—Miss Jane, I mean?"

"Sixty-six," from Margery.

"She had always seemed rational?
Not eccentric, or childish?"

"Not at all; the sanest woman I ever knew." This from Wardrop.

"Has she ever to your knowledge received any threatening letters?"

"Never in all her life," from both of them promptly.

"You heard sounds, you say, Miss Fleming. At what time?"

"About half past 1 or perhaps a few minutes later. The clock struck 2 while I was still awake and nervous."

"This person who was walking through the attics here—would you say it was a heavy person—a man, I mean?"

Margery stopped to think.
"Yes," she said finally. "It was very stealthy, but I think it was a man's step."

"You heard no sound of a struggle,
no voices, no screams?"

"None at all," she said positively.
And I added my quota.

"There could have been no such sounds," I said. "I sat in my room and smoked until a quarter to 2. I heard nothing until then, when I heard Mr. Wardrop trying to get into the house. I went down to admit him, and—I found the front door open about an inch."

Hunter wheeled on Wardrop.

"A quarter to 2?" he asked. "You were coming home from—the city?"

"Yes, from the station."

"The last train gets in here at 12:30," Hunter said slowly. "Does it always take you an hour and a quarter to walk the three squares to the house?"

Wardrop flushed uneasily, and I could see Margery's eyes dilate with amazement.

"I did not come directly home," he said almost defiantly.

"Then—will you be good enough to tell me where you did go. I have reasons for wanting to know."

"Hang your reasons. Look here, Mr.
Hunter, do you think I would hurt a hair of that old lady's head? Do you think I came here last night and killed her, or whatever it is that has happened to her, and then went out and tried to get in again through the window?"

"Not necessarily," Hunter said, unruffled. "It merely occurred to me that we have at least an hour of your time last night while this thing was going on to account for. However, we can speak of that later. I am practically certain of one thing—Miss Mai-tland is not dead or was not dead when she was taken away from this house."

"Taken away!" Margery repeated.
"Then you think she was kidnapped?"

"Well, it is possible. You are certain there are no closets or unused rooms where if there had been a murder the

also stolen the pearls, how was my confident belief.

I looked at Bella—the maid—as she moved around the dining room, her stolid face was not even intelligent, certainly not cunning. Hepple, the cook and only other servant, was partly blind, and her horizon was the diameter of her largest kettle. No—it had not been a servant, this mysterious intruder who passed the Maitland silver on the sideboard without an attempt to take it, and who floundered around an attic at night, in search of nothing more valuable than patchwork quilts and winter flannels.

It must have been after 9 o'clock when Bella came running into the room. Ordinarily a slow and clumsy creature, she almost flew. She brought up against a chair, and a cup went flying. The breaking of a cup must have been a serious offense in Miss Letitia Maitland's house.

"Miss Jane," she gasped, "Miss Jane, she's—she's gone. She's been run off with."

CHAPTER V.
A Fountain Pen.

"D O you mean she is not in her room?" asked Margery incredulously. "Isn't she somewhere around the house?"

"Go up and look at the room," the girl replied, and, with Margery leading, we ran up the stairs.

Miss Jane's room was empty. From somewhere near Miss Letitia could be heard lecturing Hepsibah about putting too much butter on the toast. Her high voice, pitched for Hepple's old ears, rasped me. Margery closed the door, and we surveyed the room together.

The bed had been occupied. Its coverings had been thrown back, as if its occupants had risen hurriedly. The room itself was in a state of confusion, a rocker lay on its side, and Miss Jane's clothing, folded as she had taken it off, had slid off on to the floor. Her shoes stood neatly at the foot of the bed, and a bottle of toilet vinegar had been upset, pouring a stream over the marble top of the dresser and down on to the floor. Over the high wooden mantel the Maitland who had been governor of the state years ago hung at a waggish angle, and a clock had been pushed aside and stopped at half past 1.

Margery picked up Miss Jane's new lace cap from the floor. It was crumpled and spotted with blood.

"She has been killed," Margery said in a choking voice.

Margery had more presence of mind than I had.

"Call Robert, the gardener," she said, "and have him help you search the grounds and cellars. I will take Bella and go through the house. Above everything, keep it from Aunt Letitia as long as possible."

It takes a short time to search an acre of lawn and shrubbery. There was no trace of the missing woman anywhere outside the house, and from Bella, as she sat at the foot of the front stairs with her apron over her head, I learned in a monosyllable that nothing had been found in the house. Margery was with Miss Letitia, and from the excited conversation I knew she was telling her—not harrowing details, but that Miss Jane had disappeared during the night.

The old lady was inclined to scoff at first.

new apprehension added to the shock of the night before he looked as though his nerves were ready to snap.

Wardrop was a man of perhaps twenty-seven, as tall as I, although not so heavy, with direct blue eyes and fair hair, altogether a manly and prepossessing sort of fellow. I was not surprised that Margery Fleming had found him attractive. He had the blond hair and offhand manner that women seem to like. I am dark myself.

He seemed surprised to find Hunter there, and not particularly pleased, but he followed us to the upper floor and watched silently while Hunter went over the two rooms. Beside the large chest of drawers in the main attic Hunter found perhaps half a dozen drops of blood, and on the edge

"I never heard of any," Margery said, but I saw Wardrop's face change on the instant. He stood frowning at the floor.

Margery was beginning to show the effect of the long day's strain. She began to cry a little, and with an air of proprietorship that I resented somehow Wardrop went over to her.

"You are going to lie down, Margery," he said, holding out his hand to help her up. "Mrs. Mellon will come over to Aunt Letitia, and you must get some sleep."

"Sleep!" she said, with scorn, as he helped her to her feet. "Sleep when things like this are occurring! Father first and now dear old Aunt Janel Harry, do you know where my father is?"

HOME COURSE IN SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE

SIXTH ARTICLE — HOME FRUIT GARDEN.

By L. C. CORBETT, Horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture.

THE possibilities in fruit culture upon restricted areas have been very generally overlooked, with the result that many persons who own a city lot, a suburban home or even a farm now look upon fruit as a luxury. This can all be changed, and much of the land which is now practically waste and entirely unremunerative can be made to produce fruits in sufficient quantity to give them a regular place upon the family bill of fare and at the same time add greatly to the attractiveness of the table and healthfulness of the diet.

In order to prove a source of constant pleasure and gratification a fruit plantation must claim the attention of its owner from early spring to late autumn. Its products, too, must be so planned as to cover the greatest possible portion of the seasons between frosts. For a commercial place on an extensive scale it would be out of the question to attempt to alter the character of the soil to suit the needs of the plant, but with a small area the case is quite different. If the soil is heavy it can be lightened with sand if it is not desirable to increase the proportion of humus which it contains. If it is lacking in organic matter the addition of leaf mold and well rotted manure or the turning under of some leguminous crop, such as cowpeas or tile may be laid in the bottom of the trench. If the soil is very stiff and retentive the tiles should not be laid over two and a half or three feet deep and about one rod apart. If the soil is porous the drains may be placed farther apart and buried deeper.

At planting time all broken or decayed roots should be cut away, leaving only smooth cut surfaces and healthy wood to come in contact with the soil. If a large part of the root area of the plant has been lost in transplanting the top should be cut back in proportion to the roots remaining.

The holes in which trees, vines or shrubs are to be set should be ample so that the roots of the plant may have full spread without bending them out of their natural course. The earth at the bottom of the holes should be loosened a spade depth below the line of excavation. The soil placed immediately in contact with the roots of the newly set plant should be rich top soil, free from sod or partially decayed organic matter. Firm the soil over the roots by trampling, as this brings the soil particles together and at the same time in close contact with the surface of the roots. A movement of soil water is thus set up and the food supply of the soil brought immediately to the use of the plant. When the operation of transplanting is complete the plant should stand one or two inches deeper than it stood in the nursery.

In the case of the apple and the pear the fruits are borne upon "spurs" of the previous year's growth only, these spurs appearing on wood one year or more of age. Heading in or shortening each shoot of the season's growth, therefore, must be done with care in order not to reduce the bearing wood beyond a profitable limit. The bearing shoots are usually obscurely located upon the sides of the branches.

With the peach, however, it is the wood of the last season's growth upon which the fruits are directly borne, and with them heading in may be successfully employed to limit the quantity of fruit borne by the tree. Japanese plums bear on both year-old wood and spurs. Pruning may therefore be used to thin the fruit, the same as in the case of the peach.

The grape bears its fruit on shoots of the season, which in turn usually arise from canes of the previous year's growth. Old wood on the grape is therefore of little value; hence the development of so many systems of training which maintain only a single permanent trunk, from the top of which the bearing canes are renewed each year.

By planting the vines closely and carrying up single trunks to a fixed height and from the top of the stalk carrying out horizontal arms along which "spurs" are maintained a short growth from each spur will be sufficient to give a uniform and sufficiently dense canopy of leaves for the arbor.

Raspberries and blackberries both bear their fruits on short shoots which arise from canes of the previous season's growth.

In the case of the currant and gooseberry the fruits are produced on both old and new wood. The fruits appear as axillary growths from the shoot itself, and wood three years or more of age is unprofitable and should be cut away.

fruits lend themselves to this treatment. Besides this method of modification, there are other methods quite as important to the owners of small areas. Standards may be grown as "bushes" or as "pyramids," thus making it possible to grow them much closer together. Pruning and training used in combination have shown the possibilities of restricting plants to the "espallier," "cordon" and other styles of training employed in growing fruits against walls. These methods not only allow plants to be grown more closely than is common in orchard practice, but they allow the grower to take advantage of locations and conditions under which trees could not develop normally.

Besides the advantage of dwarfing, grafting may be turned to good account to enable the owner of few trees to increase his sorts beyond the limits of the trees he possesses. There are single trees known which bear as many as 150 varieties of apples.

In addition to the advantages to be gained from restricting the growth of plants by training and dwarfing, some of the methods of training offer adaptations which allow of combining plants of various habits of growth to the advantage of the grower and with little or no disadvantage to the plants. To illustrate this, currants may be combined with grapes, apples with currants or raspberries, grapes and strawberries.

The advantages of these methods become apparent at once when the object is the most economical utilization of a limited land area.

Besides the special adaptations afforded by dwarfed trees and by special combinations of low growing and high growing plants, certain well known systems of pruning and training allow additional liberties to the skillful planter. The vine may be utilized as a cover for walks and drives or as a canopy over small outbuildings. A cozy summer veranda may be covered by grapevines, thus securing the double advantage of a cool, shady nook during summer and a supply of fruit in autumn.

Where there is more land at one's disposal there may be both a fruit garden and a vegetable garden.

For specific recommendations as to varieties of fruits adapted to the various fruit sections of the United States see farmers' bulletin No. 203, "Varieties of Fruits Recommended For Planting."

If the soil is loose and sandy, losing its store of plant food readily, this fault can be remedied by the addition of retentive material, such as clay. The amount of clay to be added must be governed by the degree of stiffness desired in the soil. If, on the other hand, the class of plants to be generally grown is suited to a loose, sandy soil and it seems desirable to add to the collection a plant, such as plum, which naturally requires a heavy, retentive soil, it would undoubtedly be better to change the character of the plant by grafting it upon a stock adapted to sandy soil conditions than to attempt to modify the soil to suit the plant.

Such modifications in plants are not always easily accomplished, and with many plants there is no alternate but to use them on their own roots. In this latter case the soil itself must be made to conform to the demands of the plants. The soil, in addition to being heavy and retentive, may also be cold and wet.

If the soil be unduly moist the only safe and satisfactory remedy lies in thorough underdrainage. This can be accomplished in two ways. Drains may be dug and a stone conduit built to allow the superfluous water to escape, or, what is better, agricultural berry the fruits are produced on both old and new wood. The fruits appear as axillary growths from the shoot itself, and wood three years or more of age is unprofitable and should be cut away.

Strawberries are rarely produced in profitable quantities by plants more than one year old. Plants over two years of age should be rooted out to give room for new ones.

The interest of a fruit garden may be greatly enhanced by growing there in plants not adapted naturally to the climatic region in which the garden is located. The most hardy sort should be selected, in addition to which the fruiting shoots may be wrapped in matting, covered with straw, and the fruits thus successfully protected, or, if it seems desirable, temporary sheds may be built over the plants and these thatched with straw or fodder sufficiently to protect them from frost. Then, again, semi-hardy sorts may be tipped over by cutting the roots on one side, bending the branches close to the soil, pinning them down and then covering the whole plant with matting and earth or a straw thatch and earth.

The fact that trees can be grown as dwarfs as well as standards will enable one to utilize a space which had previously been considered unsuited for the development of a tree. In proportion to size dwarf trees are more fruitful than standards, and they come into bearing sooner.

Dwarfing is accomplished by budding or grafting robust growers on slow growing stocks, and most tree

HERE'S A USEFUL RAG DOLL.

Tests Corn Just as Well as Any Expensive Contrivance.

With an expenditure of half a dollar or even less and an hour's time a seed corn tester may be made at home that will answer every purpose.

This simple device for selecting good seed ears is known as the "rag doll tester," probably because it resembles nothing more than a rag doll when it is rolled up and put to soak in a pail of water. Its efficiency was proved in several years' test of it at the Iowa agricultural experiment station, which says that it will select good ears as satisfactorily as the best expensive manufactured testers.

Buy a few yards of sheeting of good quality and tear it into strips eight inches wide and from three to five inches long. If it is planned to use the strips a number of times hem the edges, as otherwise the ravelings sometimes disarrange the kernels in unrolling.

Down the middle of each cloth strip lengthwise draw a line with a heavy pencil. Then draw squares about three inches wide and number the squares.

Wet one of the strips thoroughly and stretch it out in front of the ears to be tested. Take six kernels from ear No. 1 and place in square No. 1; take six kernels from ear No. 2 and place in square No. 2, and so on.

When the cloth has been filled begin at either end and roll the cloth up. If the cloth is well moistened the kernels will not push out of place. When the cloth has been rolled tie a string around each end rather loosely or, better still, use a rubber band. Number this roll No. 1. Then proceed with No. 2 in the same way. As many rolls may be used as are necessary to contain the corn which one has to test. From thirty to fifty ears can be tested in each roll, depending upon the length of the strip of cloth.

After the rolls have been filled they should be placed in a bucket or tub of water, where they may remain from two to eighteen hours, depending upon the preference of the operator. At the end of this time pour off the water and turn the bucket or tub upside down over the rolls or use a common dry goods box for this purpose. A couple of small pieces of wood should be laid under the rolls and one edge of the roll should be lifted from one-half to one inch in order to give ventilation. At the end of five days the kernels should be ready to read.

Depending upon the arrangement of ears, select first either roll No. 1 or the last roll filled. This cloth will be unrolled in front of the ears represented. Examine all kernels carefully. In all cases in which all six kernels are not strong in germination the ear should be thrown away.—Farm Press.

Campfire Girls' Movement Growing In Popularity.

WORK, HEALTH AND LOVE.

These Are the Watchwords of the Organization, and Its Symbol Is Fire. Character Building One of the Underlying Principles—Origin of Week Day Names.

Although less than a year old, the Campfire Girls have a membership of over 50,000. The important watchwords of the organization are "Work, Health and Love," and fire is its symbol, because fire has always been the center of the home. It is also a symbol of enthusiasm. Anything that is worth doing at all is worth doing well. Similar in its aims to the boy scout movement, there is no connection whatever between the two organizations. Each is working in its own way to improve the youth of the nation mentally, morally and physically.

There are three degrees of Campfire Girls—the wood gatherers, the fire-makers and the torch bearers. When a girl first joins she becomes a wood gatherer, and gradually as she becomes proficient in the duties imposed upon her she advances to the next higher degree. She must be able to do many useful and helpful things—there are fourteen specifications—before she is admitted to the higher degrees. Then there are honors to be won.

Indian life has furnished the models upon which the activities of the Campfire Girls are patterned. In Campfire Girl garb, adorned with beads and beadwork, they look like real forest maidens. The winning of honors is shown by wearing beads of various colors. Red stands for health craft, orange for home craft. Blue is the color for nature lore, wood brown for camp craft. Green and yellow are for handcraft and business respectively.

shape pictured is in this class carried out in mahogany colored hemp with a simple wreath of big ox eyed daisies as the only trimming, if one omits the streamer of black velvet that hangs at the back of the upturned brim.

Upstairs and Down.

A tailor suggests whisking a black skirt with strong coffee and ammonia to remove dirt. The skirt is first brushed. Then a fresh whisk is dipped into a cupful of strong coffee mixed with a teaspoonful of ammonia, and with this the skirt is brushed. The coffee should be brushed over the skirt quickly, and the brush should not hold too much of the liquid.

Ammonia, alcohol and water in equal parts form a good solution for cleaning skirts. Ammonia, of course, must be carefully used, as it damages some colors. It can be sparingly tried on an inside seam or even on a little stretch of the wrong side of the hem. If it takes out the color alcohol and water can be used instead. Naphtha is objectionable because of its clinging odor and also because a skirt cleaned with it cannot be ironed safely for many hours.

When a skirt of black or other dark colored material looks shiny from much wear it can be rubbed with a solution of borax and water. This solution removes the glaze completely and can be applied whenever the shine returns. Borax, of course, might, like ammonia, have a disastrous effect on some colors, so it, too, should be tried first on the wrong side of the skirt.

STERILIZED LINEN.

When There's a Contagious Disease In the House Look Out For Bedclothes.

When there has been serious illness in the home and while there is serious illness one of the most important things to do is to thoroughly sterilize the linen—not only the bed linen, but all handkerchiefs, towels and everything with which the patient has come or is constantly coming in contact with.

The moment that linen is removed from a sickbed it should be put in cold water and kept there until time for washing. In water it becomes quite harmless, and absolutely all danger from it is eliminated.

One great trouble is that doctors who advise soaking the linen in various germ killing solutions or promptly boiling the linen do not realize that all stains in the linen will under such conditions be made practically indelible. Of course every housewife prides herself upon her spotless linen, and to stain a great quantity of it is, in her mind, a catastrophe.

When the doctor says, "Soak your linen in this or that preparation," or "Boil all the linen at once, long and thoroughly," he does not realize that this will prevent any stains on the linen from ever coming out.

Practically all trained nurses today in private families know this is not necessary. They know that such linen put in water and kept in water will remain quite harmless. After the linen has thoroughly soaked the laundry may easily wash out the stains before putting such linen into the hot water for boiling or before soaking in

Prominent People Proud To Testify For "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. TIMOTHY McGRATH

130 ATLANTIC AVE., MONTREAL,
MARCH 1st, 1912.

"For years, I suffered from Rheumatism, being unable to work for weeks at a time and spent hundreds of dollars on doctor's medicines, besides receiving treatment at Notre Dame Hospital where I was informed that I was incurable. I was discouraged when a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". After using three packages, I felt relieved and continued until I had used five packages when a complete cure was the result after years of doctoring failed. I consider "Fruit-a-tives" a wonderful remedy. You are at liberty to use this testimonial to prove to others the good that "Fruit-a-tives" has done me."

sandwiches, and cookbooks are explored for new ways of making them, which, by the way, are endless. Of course I am taken into their confidence, but the rest of the family are not allowed to know what awaits them for supper. And I keep up their interest by letting them have freedom of choice in the purchase and preparation of food materials, for I recall how I hated this work when a girl because I was told what to prepare by my mother."

Care of Aluminium Ware.

There are two kinds of aluminium ware, the "spun" and the "cast." The spun is much lighter and should be chosen for light weight utensils and not for frying pans or serviceable kettles. Never use any alkali in water in which aluminium is washed. It will cause the outer surface to become dark. Polish nice ware weekly with a good whitening or silver cream, and the ware retains its luster longer.

MILLINERY HINTS.

Small Hats With Brims Are the Fashion This Season.

The feature of the season in millinery is the presence of the brim, which has appeared and disappeared like a jack rabbit in the brush. For years we have been wearing all kinds of turbans and caps that had only crowns and were made to fit on the head by reason of an inner crown that held them up.

If you will notice hats closely now you will see that the shapes are really smaller than they have been for decades. This does not appear to the casual observer, who feels that hats have been small for years and that the change, if any, is slight. The truth is that up until now the brimless hats were really very large in size and had to be padded or supported by a separate coronet to keep them from falling down over the nose. It is claimed by the designers that the fashion for small hats which fit the head and do not merely rest on it is due to the constant use of the motorcar by a large number of women. In Europe, where taxis are so cheap, it is not a luxury for women to ride to and fro on their daily errands. In America, where taxis are dearer than any other place in the world for some unknown reason, the mass of women cannot afford to ride, but they take their cue in fashion from those who do.

As soon as the comfort of the tiny hat was discovered women adopted it with enthusiasm. It has its defects for it is too often chosen in its most abbreviated shapes by the woman who can least afford to wear it. A tiny, jaunty hat is not intended for the woman with a large, serious face or one who does not fix her hair to fit the hat.

There are elements of comedy in a small hat as there never could be in a large hat. So beware! As the season advances one sees evidences of the larger hat bedecked with flowers. The necessary. They know that such linen put in water and kept in water will remain quite harmless. After the linen has thoroughly soaked the laundry dress may easily wash out the stains before putting such linen into the hot water for boiling or before soaking in some germ destroying preparation. As a matter of fact, no germicide is needed. A long and thorough boiling of this linen will serve that purpose and kill every germ that lurks in the folds or meshes of the cloth.

WHAT TO DO WITH EGGS.

Recipes Particularly Good For Tea Room Service.

Eggs opera are especially good for tea room service, and now that so many of these places of refreshment are run by women all over the country the recipe may be of interest. Butter an individual shirring dish; break two egg into it; set the dish into a moderate oven to remain until the egg white is slightly coagulated throughout. Set the dish on a breakfast plate; on one side of the eggs in the dish dispose half a dozen cooked stalks of asparagus, a teaspoonful of Hollandaise sauce above, and on the other side of the eggs group cubes of calf's liver broiled on one or two skewers and serve at once. To cook the liver pour boiling water over a slice of liver, cut a scant three-fourths of an inch thick, then cut in cubes. Butter one or two skewers and run them through the cubes. Broil over a moderate fire about four minutes, turning each ten seconds. Push from the skewer to the side of the egg.

Set two small slices of toasted bread, well buttered, on a serving dish. Above dispose about eighteen hot, cooked asparagus tips. Above the tips set two poached eggs. Pour over the whole a scant cup of Madeira sauce, in which six or eight peeled mushroom caps (sliced or not) have been simmered about ten minutes.

How One Woman Manages.

Owing to the fact that the maid is usually away on Sunday evening the duty of preparing this informal meal falls on the house mother. In a certain household the little daughters are permitted to take turns at preparing supper, with the understanding that it must be limited to sandwiches or an equivalent, cake, fruit, tea or chocolate.

"They are not allowed," she explained, "to serve anything heavier, not only because it is undesirable, but because they might attempt to outdo each other in elaborate dishes and thus turn what they now call 'sport' into a burden that would dampen their youthful ardor. They enjoy making

Days of the Week.

The days of the week get their names from very, very long ago, when the Norsemen had never heard of Christianity. In those days they worshipped the sun, and Sun's day was named for it. Moon's day (Monday) was the wife of the sun and, of course, had to be honored also. Tyar was the god of war, and so they had Tyr's day (Tuesday), while Wednesday is Woden's day, the god of the Norseman's heaven. Thor was the god of strength, so he has Thursday. Friday is Freya's day. Freya was the Woden's wife and Thor's mother. The last of the days, Saturday, gets its name from a Roman god, Saturn, who presided over the games on a holiday called the Saturnalia, so that it is quite appropriate that our Saturday should be a holiday too.

I'll not tell you where!
But when his ma saw
She said, "I declare!"

And straightway a patch
She sewed o'er the rent;
Then out to his play
The little boy went.

Substitute For Grab Bag.

Newer than the grab bag, usually a feature of children's parties, is the huge teapot of heavy earthenware imitating old Canton porcelain. The pot, several sizes larger than the kitchen stove's hot water kettle, has a flat lidded mouth of generous size, into which several pair of juvenile hands can be simultaneously thrust, and its plump body holds a surprising number of small favors. Its wicker handle, high and rounding, is a substantial affair, guaranteed to sustain the weight of the receptacle, and there is a long, projecting spout, from which a stream of tiny candies might easily be poured into the laps of the guests.

June 3rd at Belleville.
 The King's Birthday Celebration at Belleville, next Tuesday promises to eclipse any one day celebration ever attempted in Canada before. The committee is spending thousands of dollars to prove that Belleville can give a day that will make its very name a hall mark in celebrations. Two Aeroplane Flights by America's greatest Aviators, and one hundred other wonderful events, each of sufficient importance to make it a feature. Special excursions on all railways and steamboats. Remember the time, June 3rd, and the place, Belleville.

Excursion to Guelph.
 The Ontario Agricultural College is an educational institution that should be visited by every person interested in Agriculture. The Experimental Plots at Guelph are the largest in the world. Prof. Zavitz will personally conduct excursionists over his plots. An interesting experiment is over 100 plots on which different varieties of Alfalfa from all parts of the world are being tested for hardiness. The new dairy barn is the most up-to-date in Canada, and has just been completed at a cost of $20,000. Prof. Graham has just completed some new breeding pens for pedigree egg work in developing his famous egg strain of Barred Rocks. All the buildings will be open for the visitors, and guides will be on hand to answer questions and give information. The special fare, only $3.35 has been made so low that all interested can afford to take in this special excursion to Guelph. For fuller information see advertisement on page one.

Baseball.
 The Baseball Schedule as drawn up was presented by a committee at a meeting held on Saturday evening. The boys are looking forward to a large attendance from the ladies as well as the gentlemen this season. The first game was scheduled for last Wednesday night but owing to wet grounds was postponed. The Umpires, Scorers and Officials are asked to be on hand at the opening game on Monday night between Regals vs. Its. No charge for admission but a silver collection will be taken. All games played at the park at 6.15 p.m. sharp.
 Following is the schedule:
 May 28th, Colts vs. Regals.
 June 2nd, Regals vs. Its.
 June 4th, Its vs. Colts.
 June 9th, Regals vs. Colts.

SPRING 1913

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hobblerlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay the modest sum of $8000 per annum.
Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business.
We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire.
They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling.
What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspec-
